G N B NEWS

"I can't live without my smartphone." These days, many people say that.

Smartphones are useful, but some people use them too much. One study says that most people check their smartphones 150 times each day. Another study says that 80% of Taiwanese people always keep their smartphones with them. There also have been more and more smartphone users in Taiwan these days. In fact, people in Taiwan use smartphones more often than those in other Asian countries.

People use their smartphones to surf the Net, watch programs, chat and play games. These activities take up lots of time. Using your smartphone too much may lead to health problems. For example, you may have sleeping problems because you use smartphones late at night. Therefore, don't use your smartphone before you go to bed.

Smartphones can also affect people's social life. Some smartphone users don't feel comfortable when they have face-to-face conversations. They like talking to a screen better.

Don't use your smartphone too much, or it will control your life.

She loves singing; she loves cooking; she is so sweet to everyone around her; she is a good helper to her mom. Everything sounds good only if the word is “she,” not “he.” Sadly, “he”, Young-Zhi Yeh, was not a “she.” What’s worse, the poor boy died of being different from other boys.

He was a sweet boy. At home, he did much housework for his mom. He prepared delicious dinner for his family to enjoy the meal after a hard-working day. When he noticed his teacher was not so well, he helped her to deal with her health problem. Such a nice boy was not so nice in some people’s eyes. His schoolmates often made fun of him. The bully in school made him afraid. In the second year of his junior high, he was found lying in blood in the boys’ restroom at school. Two years after his death, Act of Gender Equality was passed.

Everybody has the right to be himself or herself, and no one has the right to hurt others just because they are different. Only respect can end the story of another sad boy lying in the blood.

When I was in college, I studied very hard. But lots of my friends did very little work. Some did just enough to pass tests. Others didn't do quite enough. Andy was one of them. He spent more time surfing on the Net in the room than studying in the library.

Before Thanksgiving Day that year, we had to take an important test in history. The test had one hundred questions. We needed to write "True" or "False" to each question. When I was studying in my room the night before that test, Andy was watching a funny movie on TV. Andy always worried a lot before tests, but on that night he looked fine. Then he told me his plan. "It's very simple. There are one hundred questions, and I have to get fifty correct to pass the test. I will just toss the coin. That way, I am sure I will get half of the questions right."

The next day, Andy came happily into the classroom. He tossed the coin for half an hour and wrote down his answers. Then he left half an hour earlier than the rest of us.

The next day, he saw the history teacher at the gate of the school. "Oh, my," the teacher said. "Did you know the grade of your test?" Then he reached into his bag and took out a coin. He threw it into the air, caught it in his hand and looked at it.

"I am terribly sorry, Andy," he said. "You failed."

The Magic Red Flower

Many years ago, there was a young girl named Daisy. Because she was so bad-looking, she didn't like going out. She hated to hear people say, "Daisy is not beautiful."

But there were times when she had to go out shopping, she was unhappy and sometimes even angry at what people said about her looks.

One night, a strange old woman came to Daisy's house. She said to Daisy, "My poor lady, let me give you a hand. Just put this magic red flower in your hair, and you'll become beautiful."

Daisy did that with no doubts the next day. Something strange happened. She became pretty! Daisy was surprised to see herself so beautiful in the mirror. She ran happily out of her house. She walked on the street and smiled at everyone when they looked at her. She became very friendly and nice, very different from what she was before. Most people said, "Daisy looks so great today!"

Finally, Daisy went back to her house happily. But before she entered the house, she saw the magic red flower by the door. She realized that she left the flower there before she hurried out. She in fact didn't wear the red flower when walking on the street!

Dear Home Exchange Readers,

Do you like traveling but always worry about paying too much? Why not try a home exchange to save money and get free vacation? “FREE vacation” is true because I have joined three home exchanges in five years and now I can’t wait to see the world again.

Five years ago, I started my first home exchange experience. At that time, I was planning a trip to Australia. However, a house near the beach or with a swimming pool was too expensive for us. Luckily, we got a house near the beach for free by exchanging our home with Amy, who came to our town for her ski trip in New York. My family loved her house very much. We enjoyed a warm winter that year. I couldn’t forget how much fun it was, so I put my wish to stay in France on the website. A French businessman named Kant decided to exchange houses because he planned to have a meeting in New York and wanted to visit Niagara Falls, which is near my house. The apartment I stayed at in France was small, but it was quite close to some famous museums and restaurants. I had a good time in France. One year ago, my husband hoped we could bring our dog to travel together. It was not easy to find the hotel that allowed us to bring a dog, so we exchanged my house again. This time, we went to Hong Kong. This was our first time to travel with our dog. It was so interesting. I strongly suggest you join the home exchange. It’s fun to share houses with others and experience the world for free.

Best,
Ann Smith

40. Kevin is reading an ad on the home exchange website. Who is the owner of the house according to the article?

It's a clean and comfortable place. You will never feel bored because there are always a lot of things to do here. For example, you can go fishing or go surfing and play lots of water sports here. You will never feel lonely even if you travel alone. Our cute pets will show you how much they enjoy being with you.

- (A) Ann Smith.
- (B) Kant
- (C) Home Exchange Reader
- (D) Amy
